ANIMATION INDUSTRY OF RUSSIA IN A CULTURAL CONTEXT: SYNERGY OF TRADITIONS AND INNOVATIONS

Organizer: Ministry of Culture of the Russian Federation, Association of Animated Film.

The animation industry of Russia is one of the most innovative areas of the creative economy, rooted in the great traditions of the Soviet school of animation. On the one hand, the industry is developing in line with global industrial trends, taking into account the demand for new types of content, new technologies and the needs of modern children. On the other hand, domestic animation creativity is based on our own unique cultural code, reflects the values embedded in it, forming the spiritual and moral basis of the worldview of the younger generation.

In a situation of external instability, the trend towards local content is growing, especially in the national republics, where projects are created in national languages and using local national heroes. Excellent examples of such content are demonstrated by the republics of Sakha (Yakutia), Bashkiria, Tatarstan and others. Each region has its own unique cultural heritage, which is carefully preserved and passed on to the younger generation, including through animation. Cartoons are created that are gaining recognition, including outside our country, for example, the series of the Yakut studio "Tundra", dedicated to the popularization of the culture of the Sakha people and originally localized in the Yakut language. In Bashkiria, a full-length cartoon "Northern Amurs" was released about the glorious Bashkir warriors, work is also underway on the series "Descendants of Salavat", and in Tatarstan, the animated series "Tugan-Batyr" about the national folklore hero and other projects based on the national epic and folk tales are being created. Questions for discussion at the session:

- What requirements should animated content based on national traditions meet?
- How to strike a balance between tradition and innovation when creating modern animated content?
- What challenges do regional studios and local animation brands face, what difficulties do they have to overcome?
- How to create a regional ecosystem for generating orders for local content?
- How can local content enter the federal and global markets?

10:00-11:30 Hall	PARTNERSHIP CAPITAL MARKET. PROSPECTS AND CHALLENGES Organizer: Delovaya Rossiya. The Russian capital market plays an important role in supporting the Russian economy at the stage of its structural transformation and the formation of long-term financial resources in it. In a situation where most of the foreign investors who previously provided a significant inflow of capital have left the Russian stock market, and business interest in equity financing is actively growing, the market of partnership (Islamic) capital seems to be increasingly promising. Thus, the law on the implementation of an experiment in partnership financing, which came into force in September 2023, has already made it possible to begin to form a new layer of client-investors and client-consumers of financial services of Islamic banking, which in turn gave a new impetus to the development and improvement of the Russian financial market, as well as the creation of conditions for attracting foreign investment from the countries of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation. However, the issue of adapting the existing financial infrastructure of the capital market to new financial products still remains. What instruments of partnership financing have already become widespread? Has the practice of implementing transactions in the partnership capital market been established? What requirements can be imposed on issuers of the partnership financing market? What are the prospects for filling the exchange market with circulating instruments of partnership finance?

PROSPECTS FOR COOPERATION IN THE SPHERE OF AGRICULTURE IN OIC COUNTRIES

Organizer: Delovaya Rossiya.

In recent years, one can observe how Russia's cooperation with the countries of the Islamic world is gradually reaching a new level. And in this case, it concerns not only the political sphere, but also trade and economic or industrial relations. For example, in the last three years, trade turnover with the OIC countries has reached $156 billion, having increased by 37%. The products of mutual trade are not only energy resources, metals and other natural resources, but also equipment and food products. At the same time, the agro-industrial sector acquires special significance in this, given that the OIC countries are capable of dominating a number of international markets in the agro-industrial complex (grain, rice, soybeans, meat and fish products, tea, coffee, cotton, silk, mineral fertilizers, feed for aquaculture and livestock).

Moreover, the halal product market itself is growing at an accelerated rate: 3.2% per year, outpacing the average annual growth rate of the global food market, which is 2.5%. The current demand for halal products is more than $200 billion, and the market itself is estimated at almost $3 trillion. In the long term, according to experts, by 2028 the turnover will reach $11 trillion. In other words, the prospect of forming new food markets is opening up, the functioning of which, however, is conditioned by the need to solve current problems of cooperation: the organization of new transport and logistics corridors, uninterrupted supplies and financial infrastructure. Questions for discussion:

- What instruments are OIC countries ready to offer to expand cooperation in the agricultural sector?
- What does Russian business need to create new agro-industrial production facilities in OIC countries?
- What are the barriers and how to overcome them?
- What role can Free Economic Zones play in strengthening cooperation in the food sector?
- What support instruments are governments ready to provide?

Moderator: Dmitry Leonidovich Antonov, Member of the General Council and Business Ambassador of Delovaya Rossiya in Iran, Chairman of the Committee on the Agro-Industrial Sector, Senior Vice President, Director of External Relations and GR of the Resource Group of Agricultural Enterprises.

Urban agglomerations are the support points - growth points for the surrounding territories and the spatial development of the country. The influence of this spatial and economic phenomenon on various public institutions, including the development of the economy, science and the innovation process in the country is indicated by strategic planning documents at the federal level. Thus, in the Strategy for Spatial Development of the Russian Federation for the period up to 2030 with a forecast up to 2036, approved by the order of the Government of the Russian Federation dated December 28, 2024 No. 4146-r, the main directions and tasks of spatial development include the disclosure of economic potential, ensuring scientific, technological and innovative development of urban agglomerations, including through the development of the necessary transport, energy and social infrastructure, as well as providing priority support in urban agglomerations, administrative centers of the constituent entities of the Russian Federation for projects in high-tech and knowledge-intensive industries for the production of goods and services.

Taking these circumstances into account, during the session, experts will discuss current issues of the influence of urbanization on the stages of the innovation process, the creation and implementation of technologies, as well as their further implementation in production in order to achieve technological sovereignty. Experts will also try to assess the contribution to the development of scientific potential: is the most favorable climate for the development of innovation processes in the environment of large cities (megapolises) or in urban agglomerations? Is the campus model of development of science and higher education, implemented mainly in small cities, a possible alternative?

TRANSPORT COOPERATION OF THE CASPIAN STATES

Organizer: Ministry of Transport of the Russian Federation.

The globalization of trade, the formation and development of sustainable interregional supply chains have increased the importance of transport links, their quality, availability and reliability, for the stable functioning of international trade and the economy as a whole.

The volume of bilateral and transit traffic between the Caspian countries is steadily growing, which creates the need to increase the capacity and stabilize the operation of international transport corridors, including multimodal ones. Their development includes both the modernization of roads and railways and the construction of logistics centers, modern checkpoints, seaports and intermodal hubs.

At the same time, no physical infrastructure makes sense without agreed legal regimes, transit and trade agreements, as well as well-established logistics services, planning, modeling and management of cargo flows.

The combination of these physical and non-physical measures creates conditions for reducing the time spent crossing borders and transshipping cargo between different modes of transport, allowing transport service operators to form a reliable and predictable offer for servicing international trade.

During the plenary session chaired by the Minister of Transport of the Russian Federation R.V. Starovoit, participants from the Caspian region countries will be able to present their developments and accumulated experience on practical measures and tools aimed at monitoring and managing transport corridors.

DIGITAL ACCELERATION OF SCIENCE: APPLICATION OF ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE IN CHEMISTRY, PHYSICS AND BIOLOGY
Organizer: Innopolis.

The section is devoted to the discussion of the application of artificial intelligence technologies in scientific research, including physics, chemistry and biology. These areas of science actively use AI to accelerate discoveries and optimize processes. For example, large language models (LLM) can significantly improve the analysis of chemical data, such as the structure of molecules, proteins and chemical reaction conditions. This will open up new horizons for the creation of innovative materials, the treatment of diseases and the development of new technologies. It is expected that the use of AI in these areas can give the economy an increase comparable to what is already happening in the field of text processing. The importance of this area is beyond doubt: it can play a key role in scientific progress and global technological transformations.

ECOLOGY OF INDUSTRIAL CITIES, OR HOW TO ENSURE A WELL-BEING HABITAT FOR THE POPULATION OF LARGE CITIES

Organizer: Ministry of Education and Science of the Russian Federation.

Environmental issues of megacities are a problem for almost the entire planet, since today half of the world's population lives in large cities, and by 2050, according to forecasts, approximately 66% will live there.

Anthropogenic loads on the environment of large industrial cities have grown to gigantic proportions. Almost all megalopolises have a whole package of environmental problems - from air pollution by harmful emissions from enterprises and transport to water pollution by waste water and uncontrolled garbage dumps.

The session will discuss environmental issues and propose possible solutions based on scientific methods with the introduction of the best innovative approaches, including the organization of comprehensive monitoring of the state of the natural environment. It should be noted that Tatarstan is the first region to organize interaction between industrial enterprises and institutes of the Russian Academy of Sciences.

The UN World Tourism Organization reported that in 2024, global tourism figures returned to pre-pandemic levels. Last year, about 1.4 billion tourists traveled, which is 11% more than in 2023 (140 million more). According to experts, industrial tourism accounts for 10 to 15% of all tourist flow in the global hospitality industry.

THE IMPACT OF THE CYCLIC ECONOMY AND "GREEN" PROJECTS ON THE DEVELOPMENT OF RUSSIA AND OIC COUNTRIES

Organizer: Chamber of Commerce and Industry of the Russian Federation.

Currently, in Russia and foreign countries there is a steady trend of increasing waste.

The process of rethinking the traditional (linear) economy and setting at the state level the tasks of returning useful components that can be extracted from production and consumption waste into economic circulation is becoming more and more obvious. Waste from a linear economy is an asset and resource for a closed-loop economy.

The effectiveness of the implementation of the principles of a closed-loop economy is associated with an increase in the rational use of resources, the creation of products taking into account the scenario of their disposal and the possibility of secondary use as raw materials for the creation of new products, as well as inter-industry production cooperation and systemic support from the legislative, executive authorities and business.

INNOVATIVE HUMANITARIAN FINANCING MODELS: HOW CAN ISLAMIC FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS REDUCE THE DEVELOPMENT FUNDING GAP?

Organizer: Federal Agency for the Commonwealth of Independent States, Compatriots Living Abroad and International Humanitarian Cooperation (Rossotrudnichestvo).

The extensive UN system exists in the context of a "chronic" deficit in funding for humanitarian programs. Thus, according to the Secretary-General's report on the work of the Organization, in 2023, underfunding of humanitarian activities amounted to a record 60% - the $22.7 billion provided by donors covered less than half of the $56.1 billion needed to save lives. At the same time, countries that can be conditionally classified as "Arab donors" (Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Kuwait, UAE) traditionally allocate impressive amounts of funding for development cooperation. Thus, in monetary terms, the ratio of official development assistance to gross national income is, on average, twice as high as the indicator for member countries of the Development Assistance Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. It is expected that by 2027, the size of Islamic finance in the world will reach $6.7 trillion. They are based on the principles of sustainable development, profit and loss sharing, prohibition of speculation, prevention of deterioration of the client's financial situation, which forms the prerequisites for sustainable development. In this regard, against the background of the urgent need to mobilize resources for humanitarian purposes and assistance to development, one of the effective sources of financing social and humanitarian projects is Islamic financial instruments and forms of charity.

The following topics will be discussed during the panel discussion:

- the basic principles and concept of Islamic finance, the scale of Islamic banking – a universal solution or an exclusive option for regions with a Muslim majority;
- practice of implementing Islamic banking instruments, cooperation between the Eurasian Development Bank and the Islamic Development Bank;
- the potential for developing cooperation between international financial institutions and banks promoting Islamic financing instruments and non-profit humanitarian organizations to solve the problems of the "Eurocentric" system of development assistance;
- country and regional priorities of "Arab donors" and the areas of development assistance in which they are most active; politics, charity or strict financial calculation – what goals are pursued by "new donors".

Organizer: Association of Clusters, Technology Parks and SEZs of Russia.

Cooperation between special economic zones (SEZ) is a trend and an important tool for establishing multilateral economic cooperation and trade and industrial cooperation between countries. The BRICS countries are already actively working in this direction. In 2024, the creation of the International Association of BRICS SEZs was initiated, the purpose of which is to create effective territories with preferential treatment and assistance in localizing business on infrastructure-prepared sites.
